

SEMESTER AT SEA COURSE SYLLABUS

Voyage: Spring 2014

Discipline: English

ENLT 2559: Global Shakespeares

Division: Lower Division

Faculty Name: Dan Kinney

Pre-requisites:

Basic composition training; some collegiate lit.-study desirable.

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

Shakespeare is the most global of authors, and our voyage affords us a great chance to engage with World Shakespeares first-hand. Supplementing original texts with selected live performances, major film adaptations, and recorded productions from the Global Shakespeare Festival held in Shakespeare's rebuilt Globe in London in 2012, we will study how Shakespeare's concerns morph and migrate across time and space. In its way, every staging is a new adaptation of some starting script or design; in a modular sequence correlated where possible with performance occasions onshore, we will try to do justice to great Shakespeare plots and their cultural and contextual permutations from Henry IV Part I to Hamlet to Macbeth and from A Midsummer Night's Dream to The Tempest.

COURSE OBJECTIVES:

Apart from basic practice in critical thinking and textual analysis we will look for the various ways in which our voyage and onshore performance experiences can illuminate these texts and vice versa; we will study the shifting dynamics of text and performance across time and space and investigate some of the principal ways Shakespeare's art mirrors life and vice versa.

FIELD WORK

Field lab attendance is mandatory for all students enrolled in this course. Please do not book individual travel plans or a Semester at Sea sponsored trip on the day of our field lab.

My two full-day field lab proposals are as follows (locations contingent on Shakespeare productions and classes in English-speaking ports that we visit): Singapore or Cape Town

Attendance at an onshore production of one of the plays we are studying along with a meal and a pre- or post-show seminar or discussion with cast or director or both.

A meal and impromptu roundtable-discussion of one of the plays we are studying with some onshore college class also engaged with a similar selection of Shakespeare plays

FIELD ASSIGNMENTS

Each student should attend the shore-session equipped with 6 generative questions about what this or that telling detail contributes to Shakespeare's design in the drama that we'll be discussing; in 2 or more pages (to be posted before the next class), every student should write up his/her sense of what the day out had to teach us about that play and Shakespeare more generally.

METHODS OF EVALUATION / GRADING RUBRIC

Class requirements: lively participation including 6 brief email responses, 3 short (3-5 pp.) papers (2 on Shakespeare plays, and 1 posted for the entire class on a film adaptation), 1 Field Lab with a writeup, and a final exam; grade weighting for short papers, Field Lab/writeup, and exam/participation: 20% + 20% + 20% + 20% + 20%). Extra credit for a 2nd film-version posting. Please ask me in advance anytime that you need an extension; unexcused late essays will be marked down by a half a letter grade for each day late. You are allowed one unexcused absence from class. After that, your class participation grade drops by a full letter grade for each absence.

The code prohibits all acts of lying, cheating, and stealing. Please consult the Voyager's Handbook for further explanation of what constitutes an honor offense.

Each written assignment for this course must be pledged by the student as follows: "On my honor as a student, I pledge that I have neither given nor received aid on this assignment." The pledge must be signed, or, in the case of an electronic file, signed "[signed]."

Stephen Orgel's wide-ranging introduction examines changing attitudes to The Tempest, and reassesses the evidence behind the various readings. He focuses on key characters and their roles and relationships, as well as on the dramatic, historical, and political context, finding the play to be both more open and more historically determined than traditional views have allowed.
