V. Teaching at the University of Maryland, College Park

Undergraduate

My courses in this period include 400 level courses on Nazi Germany, Ideas and Politics in Twentieth Europe, Europe Since 1939, Twentieth Century Germany, History 113, Europe Since from the Renaissance and Reformation to the Revolutions of 1989-90, and Twentieth Century Europe (History 240).

Graduate

Since arriving at the University of Maryland in fall 2000, I have advised nine doctoral dissertations to completion.

I have taught the Field Seminar in 20th Century Europe (History 729) as well as a Research Seminar in 20th Century Europe (History 848) in addition to working with following graduate students at various phases of their work.

I have advised or am advising the following doctoral dissertations.

In spring 2003, Keith Alexander successfully defended his doctoral dissertation "From Red to Green in the Island City: The Alternative Liste West German and the Evolution of the West German Left, 1945-1990."

In 2005, Michael Peterson successfully defended his doctoral dissertation in 2005. In 2009 Cambridge University Press published a revised version with the title Missiles for the Fatherland: Peenemunde, National Socialism and the V-2 Missile. He is employed as a historian in the Defense Intelligence Agency of the United States Government.

In September 2007, Christina Morina's successfully defended her doctoral dissertation: "Legacies of Stalingrad. Memory and Representation of the War on the Eastern Front in the Political Cultures of both German States: A Study of the Intersection of War, Memory and Politics, 1943-1973." In Fall 2007, she was offered and accepted a position as a Wissenschaftliche Assistant (roughly equivalent to a non-tenured Assistant Professor at the University of Jena, in Germany. In September 2011, Cambridge University Press will publish a revision of the dissertation under the title, Legacies of Stalingrad: Remembering the Eastern Front in Germany Since 1945.

In October 2008, Nicholas Schlosser, successfully defended his dissertation, "The Berlin Radio War: Broadcasting in Cold War Berlin and the Shaping of Political Culture in Divided Germany, 1945-1961." He is a professor of history at the Marine Corps University in Quantico, Virginia.

In November 2008, Andrew Kellett successfully defended his dissertation, "Fathers and Sons: American Blues and British Rock 'n' Roll, 1960-1975." He is a Visiting Assistant Professor at Hartford Community College, in Maryland.

In November 2009, Stephen Scala defended his doctoral dissertation "Understanding the Class Enemy: Foreign Policy Expertise in East Germany." He is working as a historian in the Defense Intelligence Agency of the United States Government.

Jyoti Mohan defended her dissertation "Constructing India: French Representation of India in the Nineteenth Century" in November 2009.

Melissa Kravetz defended her doctoral dissertation "Creating a Space in the Medical Profession: Female Physicians, Maternalism, and Eugenics Work in Weimar and Nazi Germany" in spring 2011.

Mirna Zakic defended her doctoral dissertation, "The Furthest Watch on the Rhine: Ethnic Germans, National Socialist Ideology, and the German Occupation of the Serbian Banat, 1941-1944" in May 2011. She has received an appointment as Assistant Professor of Modern European history at Ohio University in Athens.

Paul Schmitt defended his doctoral dissertation, "From Colonies to Client-States: The Origins of France's Postcolonial Relationship with Sub-Saharan Africa, 1940-1969" in spring 2011. Dr. Schmitt, who also has a law degree, will be clerking for a United States Federal Judge.

Sheldon Goldberg is doing research on his dissertation on the disarmament of Germany after World War II and the rearmament the Federal Republic of Germany after 1949 and should finish in 2011.

Jeremy Best spent 2009-10 doing archival work in Germany on his dissertation on "Ambiguous Agents of Empire: German Missionaries and Imperial Politics, 1860-1919." I expect him to finish in fall 2011.

My doctoral students Robert Hutchinson and Christopher Donohue took and passed their doctoral oral and written examinations in spring 2011.

Today, only six months after publishing my second book, I'm publishing my fourth book. I've self published three. I've self published three books in the past six months. What triggered such a change? It started when Seth Godin told me this on my podcast: "If you're publishing yourself, you have the most committed publisher in the world". You're still going to be the head of marketing for your book. So how do you learn that? Well, you learn it by doing. And the easiest way to do it is to come out with a book a week on the Kindle. It costs nothing to do this. When I published books with small German publishers, I always got a bunch of hard copies for free (and evidently also a pdf), did not pay a penny even if the whole book was in full colour, and the editing/typesetting service was reliable and competent. It is also not true that authors necessarily have to pay for colour reproductions in their printed books nowadays. Finally, I did get offers from small publishing houses to produce a book for a (small) percentage of the sales. Such offers typically included sharing in the cost of manuscript preparation, in other words sharing in the risk. On a last note. My most read publication by far is a self-published small book. However, in this case the considerable authors cost including travel were covered by a third party. Cite. Printed books vs digital books is an age-old debate. There are and will be people who support printed books as well as electronic books (eBooks). With the rising number of tech-savvy people, every service provider is digitizing their services so as to cater to this large community of digital users. Publishing is also one such industry which has entered the digital era to make reading more convenient for people. If you compare the two, you would find that although printed hardcover books are much loved for their authenticity and the feel of holding an actual book, eBooks are more functional and fare far better in terms of ease of carrying. Let us see some of the advantages that eBooks have over the traditional printed books. Here are the Top 10 Advantages of eBooks over Printed Books
